

New Venice Wrap Baby Towel – Review & Competition!

June 28, 2011 by Mirka | 37 Comments

When I was sent the Koeka Venice Wrap Towel for a review, one of my friends who has a baby was with me and she was very pleased to help me with reviewing it as I let her keep this sample. I was sent a creamy version, and the first thing we spotted straight away, was its unique star shape. But that's not the only feature I have never seen on a bath towel before. It has a hooded head, which I have seen before, but also a giant kangaroo pocket at the base.

When we bathed my friend's baby, we couldn't stop admiring how great this towel is. It was sooo easy to wrap the little one and keep her snug and cosy in this soft towel. Her feet were kept in place and stayed warm thanks to being inside the "kangaroo pouch". The designer has even thought of a hanging loop at the top of the towel, so that we can have it handy for the next bath time!

Using your Venice Shawl Baby Bath Towel:

- lie the towel on the floor
- lie your baby carefully on the towel
- pull the hood over their head for warmth
- tuck their feet in the novel kangaroo pouch
 - pull one side flap over
 - and pull the other side flap over

Product features:

- Its innovative design which creates superior snugness and safety for baby (with the hood and kangaroo pouch not only helping baby feel beautifully cocooned but also secure in their parent's arms)
- The luxurious softness of its fabric (uber plush and cashmere soft terry towelling that wicks moisture away from baby's delicate skin)
- Its easy care, with the high quality cotton terry being able to withstand machine washing at low temperatures to stay looking as good as new!
- The stylish cut of the fabric and colour options available (with the distinctive star shape design available in an unrivalled selection of 16 colours including traditional whites, jewel brights from cobalt blue through to fuschia and funky alternative colours including army green and silver)
